

Third Trimester (28 - 36 weeks)

What will happen at this appointment?

The MA will obtain your weight and BP. Your urine sample will be checked for protein and glucose. The MA will also check the baby's heart rate. The doctor will discuss any questions or problems you may have. On the appointment after the glucose test, the doctor will review the result with you.

If your blood type is Rh negative, the doctor will discuss the Rhogam injection.

You will be offered the Tdap vaccine (see attached forms). Depending on the time of year, you may also be offered the seasonal flu vaccine and RSV vaccine.

How should I be feeling at this time?

Most ladies feel well, but in the third trimester, some nausea and fatigue may return. Some vomiting occasionally may also return. Most ladies report an increase in pressure in the lower pelvic / vaginal area. These symptoms are very common.

When is my next sonogram?

In general, if your 20 weeks sonogram was normal and you have no medical problems, we will repeat another sonogram at around 32 weeks to check the estimated fetal weight.

When is my next appointment?

In general, your next appointment will be in 2 weeks.

What should I expect before the next appointment?

Your belly should get larger

Your baby should get bigger

Your baby's movements should get stronger.

When should I call?

You should call if you have any of the following:

You have any vaginal bleeding/spotting

Your water breaks

Your baby is not moving well

You start having contractions 4 times per hour
